TILBUSTER station has its sights set on undergraduates to be top role models for children at the farm project.

Youth worker Charlie Winter made a start on Tuesday at the university's Lifesaver day chatting with new students in hopes of gaining volunteers this year for the project.

Students would reap benefits with hours of their time donated put towards the New England Award, Mr Winter said.

Students could make a valuable contribution to the community while they studied.

"Hands-on learning is just as important as scholarly learning," Mr Winter said.

However it isn't just students who can volunteer. No particular experience is required to lend a hand and get your hands dirty Mr Winter said and help was always welcome.
